

State of Colorado

The House of Representatives

Convened in the

Seventy - First General Assembly

Hereby extends sincere commendations to

Forest Advisory Council

Colorado has nearly 25 million acres of forest lands. These forest lands, of which two-thirds are controlled by federal agencies, provide a multitude of benefits including clean water, clean air, wildlife habitat, recreation, forest products, scenic beauty, and quality of life. Stewardship of these federal forest lands is necessary for Colorado citizens to continue to enjoy the myriad values that healthy, resilient forests supply. The members of the Colorado House of Representatives support proactive management of forest lands in Colorado and encourage federal land management agencies in Colorado to provide consistent sustainable funding over time for stewardship of their forest lands.
